Our Objectives

The Talent Marketplace is designed to empower employees to take ownership growth while helping Vanderbilt better understand, develop, and deploy its tale core objectives are to:

- Make skills visible and actionable
  Create a shared, skills-based understanding of talent by bringing together profiles, learning, and career opportunities in one connected ecosystem.

- Support continuous growth and development
  Enable employees to see where they are today, understand what skills they are building, and take intentional steps toward future opportunities.

- Connect learning to real capability
  Ensure learning is purposeful by clearly linking courses and development experiences to skill awareness, progression, and application over time.

- Increase career transparency and access
  Provide visibility into career roles, pathways, and opportunities across Vanderbilt so employees can explore what's possible and plan with clarity.

- Enable meaningful development conversations
  Create a shared foundation for employees and managers to discuss growth, readiness, and next steps using a common language around skills and aspirations.

- Strengthen internal mobility and opportunity
  Help connect people to roles, projects, and experiences aligned to their skills and interests, supporting talent movement based on capability [illegible]st position.

Our Philosophy

The Talent Marketplace is built on the b[illegible] dynamic, and careers are not linear.

We believe employees thrive when they [illegible] those skills grow through learning and experience, and explore opportunities th[illegible]n with their interests and aspirations. Development should be intentional, visible[illegible] accessible, without requiring employees to navigate disconnected systems or guess what comes next.

The Talent Marketplace shifts the focus from roles to skills, from static snapshots to evolving capability, and from limited career paths to transparent opportunity. It is not about checking boxes or racing to mastery, but about helping people build a strong foundation, gain confidence, and move forward with purpose over time.

Our Guiding Principles

- Skills-first, not role-first
  Skills are the common language that connects learning, development, and opportunity. Roles may change, but skills travel and grow over time.
- Growth is continuous and evolving
  Talent Profiles and development journeys are living reflections of progress, not fixed assessments. Growth is measured over time, not at a single point.
- Learning builds foundations
  Learning creates awareness and shared understanding. Mastery comes through experience, application, and continue
